

Pattern - Geometry Quilt Squares

Developed as part of Complementary Learning: Arts-integrated Math and Science Curricula generously funded by the Martha Holden Jennings Foundation

Introduction:

Students will explore color and pattern, using only isosceles right triangles to create a paper quilt square design.

Grade Level and Subject Area:

Grade level: 9-12

Subject Area: Geometry

Key Concepts:

- Students must be proficient at using a ruler to measure, in either inches or centimeters.
- Students must be able to identify and apply the following: square, triangle, right triangle, isosceles triangle, perpendicular and parallel lines, diagonals, sides, vertices, area formula for a square, translations, reflections, rotations.

Materials:

List all of the associated artworks; handouts; books; technology.

- Powerpoint presentation Patterns (images from the CMA)
- Posterboard, or similarly stiff cardboard, cut into 12" square pieces.
- Construction paper. 9"x12" is ideal. Two or three colors. You may like to use school colors, holiday colors, etc.
- 12-inch rulers
- Scissors
- Gluesticks
- Graph paper (any size, but ½" squares is ideal) on which to plan the design.
- Colored pencils for design planning.
- Envelopes and folders for holding paper pieces between class sessions.

Procedure:

I use this lesson with my Basic Geometry students, who are in grades 10 and 11, typically. We do this project after we have learned about parallel and perpendicular lines, triangle classification, quadrilateral classification, and polygon terminology, such as sides, vertices, and diagonals. We have 40-minute class periods.

I choose the colors of paper we will use. Depending on the time of year, we might use school colors or holiday colors. We use either two or three colors—no more—for the best quilt effect.

Students will practice designing a quilt square made up of a four-time repeated pattern. Four blocks (same pattern) make up a student's 12" block. Each of the four blocks is composed of 8 isosceles triangles cut from four 3" squares of colored paper. (The finished product will therefore have 32 triangles cut from 16 squares.) The practice designs can be drawn with colored pencil in miniature scale on the graph paper, so that students may experiment with several designs, in order to decide on which design they will implement with cut paper.

Designing could easily take one 40-minute class period, as students experiment with different arrangements of their triangles. If a student is having difficulty visualizing how the triangles can be translated, reflected, rotated, etc., s/he can cut out mini-triangles in 2-3 colors and move them around on his/her desk, until a pleasing pattern is found. Then the design could be transferred to graph paper, either by tracing or gluing the pieces onto the graph paper.

Some of the steps may be done in different order. For instance, this year I did “Day 2” and the math discussion of “Day 1” first; it actually took two days this time. Then I did the designing portion of “Day 1” and had students complete several design ideas over the weekend. The actual piecing together of triangles began before spring break, and will be completed after the break. Things seemed to take longer than planned this year, for various reasons. The lesson stretched from 3 days to 6 days. In addition, my classes had been experimenting with color, pattern, and geometry in several other miniprojects throughout the year, to prepare them for this project.

Day 1 Review definition of isosceles right triangle. Overview of the project, including discussion of dimensions of finished product, area formula, how many 3” squares will fit into a 12” square. Demonstrate how to set up graph paper into mini-blocks of 16 squares. Experiment with designs on graph paper. (The CMA powerpoint on pattern was viewed and discussed right before the students started experimenting.) Decide on a design to be used for one’s project.

Day 2 One sheet of each color for each student. Instruction and supervision on measuring 3” squares, using the edge of the paper as the side of a row of squares, and using knowledge of parallel and perpendicular lines to double-check one’s measurements. How many 3” squares can we get from a 9”x12” piece of paper? Cut out the squares. Use ruler to draw one of the diagonals for each square. Cut along the diagonal to produce two isosceles right triangles. Store triangles in envelopes.

Day 3 Use graph paper design sheet as a guide in placing and gluing triangles onto the 12” square of cardboard. Emphasize that no gluing should be done until the entire design is laid out and checked over. Care should be taken when gluing, so that no triangles overlap, and that there is little or no “white space” left between triangles.

Display suggestion: Hanging all the students’ projects together in one big “quilt” formation makes for a very striking display. I particularly like hanging them “on point,” so that the “quilt” forms a big diamond on the wall outside my classroom. Very dramatic!

Standards:

Include: the subject area and visual arts ODE standards and benchmarks associated with this lesson; the national standards associated (see <http://www.educationworld.com/standards/>); and how this relates to IB Standards.

Pattern

Translation
Reflection
Rotation

Geometry

- Isosceles right triangle

- Parallel and perpendicular lines

- Diagonals

Measurement

- Linear measurement

- Area

| Label Copy:          | Navajo blankets are splendid microcosms of the Southwest's cultural richness. This example has two old Navajo designs: the terraced diamond and the striped moki pattern. Moki's origin is unclear. It may have come from Pueblo peoples, from whom the Navajo learned weaving after migrating to the Southwest from Canada. Or it could have come from the Spaniards, who arrived in the Southwest in 1540, not long after the Navajo. Though the patterns are old, the blanket was created |

| Label Copy:          | The ability to combine different designs and colors harmoniously was one of the unparalleled achievements of Islamic art. This silk curtain fragment reveals juxtapositions of large and small scaled designs with curving and angular lines, all woven with bold colors in bands of varying widths. The contrasts are featured in the upper design of large squares positioned to form eight-pointed stars, in the narrow band with ivory-silk cursive script offering "good fortune and prosperity," and in the wide band with large yellow-silk kufic script extending "beatitude." A rare, complete contemporary silk |

| Label Copy:          | María Martínez and her husband, Julian, achieved international fame for black-on-black ware, which they began to make in 1918. The process involves painting a pattern in slip-a creamy mix of clay and water-on a surface that has already been uniformly slipped and then polished. With firing, the exposed polished areas become glossy while the second layer of slip retains a matte finish. Aside from her husband, María Martínez worked with other family members, here her daughter-in-law Santana Roybal Martínez. |

| Label Copy:          | As head of the Arts and Monument Division in Japan, Lee had the unique opportunity to examine Japanese cultural monuments, including the rarely seen art treasures preserved in the Shoso-in repository in Nara. This experience informed his establishment of the standards of quality required for art acquisition. This exquisite Chinese mirror-a rare surviving specimen of its type-was acquired from Japan, where there has been a long tradition of collecting Chinese art. |

| Label Copy:          | This curtain was probably woven in Granada, the last Muslim stronghold in Spain. Not only was Granada a famous center of silk weaving, but the central and side panels of the curtain are inscribed with the motto of the Nasrid dynasty which ruled that city from 1231 to 1492. This is the largest, most complete and most ornate curtain to have survived from the Middle Ages when silk curtains were commonly hung from the windows, walls and beds of medieval palaces and castles. Its design is known to have been a standard one for curtains woven in Nasrid Spain during the 15th century, and if this curtain did not actually hang in the Alhambra Palace, it is undoubtedly the type |

| Label Copy:          | Active just after World War II, Van Os was a pioneering Dutch photographer who gained considerable recognition in postwar Europe for his experimental imagery. This abstract composition was made exclusively with the camera, and the movement of light is both the means of expression and the subject of the picture. Layered geometric shapes give the slightest sense of a three-dimensional arrangement of bold shapes. |

| Label Copy:          | This monumental painting is a classic example of the work that brought Pop artist Andy Warhol to the forefront of 20th-century art. It is the largest of his many renderings of Marilyn Monroe, a series prompted by news of the actress's suicide in August 1962. Marilyn became Warhol's favorite subject among the various celebrities whose images he used throughout his career to summarize essential aspects of our era. His paintings and prints of the famous film star were based on a photograph taken |

| Label Copy:          | When this luxurious French silk was hung as a curtain in a New York City penthouse apartment overlooking Greenwich Village in the late 1920s, it was strikingly avant garde. The linear drawing of exotic tropical vegetation is characteristic of the French Art Deco movement—highly creative Art Moderne decorative work that relied upon the luxury trades for its production for some thirty years (about 1910 to 1940). This silk was designed about 1927 by the prominent Art Deco designer, Paul Rodier, who was renowned for his technical knowledge of textiles, which he used to achieve rich textures. In this reversible fabric, the nobly tangerine-copper silk pattern contrasts with the shimmering golden silk ground, creating a |

| Label Copy:          | The art of the European Migration Period (3rd-7th centuries AD) is almost exclusively one of personal adornment-a portable art that followed men and women to their graves. Belt buckles with large rectangular attachment plates have been discovered in cemeteries across the Iberian Peninsula-now occupied by Spain and Portugal-from the period of Visigothic occupation (about AD 412-711). Their decoration varies. Finer examples, like this one, are distinguished by brilliantly inlaid semi-precious stones and colored glass. Garnets were especially |
